Sept. To Mrs. Maria (Weston) Chapman No.65

<Portsmouth, N.H.> The writer offers, in response to the addressee's request, a contribution to the Liberty Bell. The writer had succeeded in forming a Ladies' Anti-Slavery Society but "we were few in numbers & almost wholly wanting in zeal." Abby Kelley's recent lectures, however, have resulted in an increase in numbers and interest. Miss Kelley, having procured about 20 new subscribers for the Nat. Anti-Slavery Standard, requested the writer to suggest to the addressee that, since many of the subscribers know nothing about the Anti-Slavery cause except what they have learned from her lectures, "a portion of the Standard be[illegible]oted exclusively to the first principles of the subject." [illegible]pt.29th the writer encloses a small sum for the Liberty Bell, and tells of "a noble lecture" by Jason Whitman, a Unitarian clergyman. Asks the add-

To Deborah Weston

No.53 A

[Boston] The writer expects that Caroline Weston "finds me rather a dull scholar..." Gives news of affairs in Weymouth, and tells of the newest fashions. The writer heard Mr. Henry Brewster Stanton lecture at Weymouth. At Mrs. Maria Weston Chapman's the writer saw the Misses Tappan and Mr. Garrison who was entertaining everyone by his conversation. The writer has seen his child books; "Tolerable but nothing remarkable." Gives news of Weymouth abolitionists.

«Cherry-Grove, Md.» The writer tells about her life in the household of the Governor. "The children are very good natured but very poor schollars ... The Governor is a fleshy and jolly old man ... the house is full of company all the time." Reports an after-dinner conversation about free blacks slaves, and Abolitionists. "I felt rather bad ... but was forced to hear it, they said I suppose you have no slaves in Massachusetts ..." Tells of talk about a slave insurrection in Louisiana where one of the slaves was said to have a letter from Arthur Tappan, "urging him to the act." The writer will go (with the Governor's family) to Annapolis, where she expects to have a pleasant winter "as far as balls and parties can make it." The writer thinks there is no danger of her liking slavery. Describes the treatment and condition of the slaves and repeats a story told by Miss Veazy, of her punishing a slave by whipping. The writer has seen in a Philadelphia paper that "Miss Grimké, a talented Carolinian girl, was lecturing in Worcester." The writer expects next summer to have two more scholars, but does not know if she can make the Governor's two children "learn anything, they all tell me I must whip them ..."

[Annapolis, Md.] The writer asks the addressee not to write such mournful letters, as she is homesick enough. The writer will try to remain here until October, and then come home for good. Hears the Abolitionists "railed upon almost every day". A great friend of the writer thought it "a pity that they were not all strung up." The writer is quite a favorite with some who abuse the Abolitionists most, and it is perhaps fear of losing their good opinion that prevents her from telling them that she is also one. It is doubtful whether her telling them would do any good, and she might be sent home. The writer has been given what she [illegible] long wished for-the poems of Mrs. [Felicia Dorothea] Hema[illegible] Describes acquaintances in Annapolis. Will soon be in the country, where she expects to be especially homesick.

«Cecilton? Md.» The writer would like to have sent "the pieces in the papers" about the Philadelphia Convention and about the wedding of Angelina E. Grimké, who was said to have black groomsmen and bridesmaids. Reports a conversation with Joseph Veazey (the governor's son?) in which the writer told him that she was an Abolitionist." He said that all the Abolitionists ought to be hung, and I told him he would have to begin with me ..." Remarks: "If you could only see the . Gov.'s lady storm, and beat the poor slave you would think she was one of the furies." Comments on news about various acquaintances.

[Cherry Grove, Md.] The writer will go home in three months. The Governor is going to put the children(the writer's pupils) out to school. Reports two contradictory remarks by the Governor about John Quincy Adams, one that he "had better be at home he was an old fool," the other that he (the Governor) wished he "knew half as much as he does," adding that he was not an abolitionist. The writer repeats stories she has heard tell about Arthur Tappan and Maria Weston Chapman.

To William Lloyd Garrison

«New York» Was obliged to re-copy the letters to be sent to Charles Stuart and George Thompson owing to the omission of the words "at their own charge." The American Anti-Slavery Society is holding meetings to determine the rate of compensation to be paid agents and the extent of its aid to the Liberator. Suggests that W.L.G. move to New York.

To William Lloyd Garrison No.97

[New York] A report of the proceedings of a meeting of the American Anti-Slavery Society called "in reference to the affairs of the Liberator ..." It was voted to purchase certain pamphlets (British Opinions, Rankin's Letters, London Speeches), and a resolution was adopted which stated that the Society was without funds, and that any future contributions will have to be devoted to the Society's own purposes. The Society would not buy the Abolitionist, because it was a New England periodical. Thinks that the N.E. Abolitionists should try to pay their own debts. It was suggested that the Liberator be merged with the [illegible]ancipator.

«Philadelphia» The writer refers to a letter recently sent by the sister of the writer, who desires, in case the letter should not be published in the Liberator to have it returned to her. Further, the writer would like to have some of the information that she is giving added, in condensed form, to the letter, if printed. The writer's sister, when attending the Cherry St. meeting, was forcibly carried out by the guard. With respect to the writer's own case, the Monthly Meeting of Monallen, Pa. has protested by letter against the Cherry Street charges against her.
